3D FRONTLIT CHANNEL LETTERS

Front lit channel letters are the most common type of channel letter. A sign using this lettering features lights that illuminate through the face of letters, a logo, or other shapes. This is accomplished by using a translucent acrylic face, colored or with a vinyl overlay.

3D BACKLIT CHANNEL LETTERS

Back lit channel letter signs are mounted away from the wall, causing the light to form a halo effect behind the sign. Instead of acrylic, reverse channel letters have a metal face. They're also fitted with aluminum letters. Reverse lit channel letters typically have clear acrylic or polycarbonate backs.

3D SIDELIT CHANNEL LETTERS

Side-Lit letters provides a premium option for exterior channel lettering and unique look with an ability to cast a mild halo illumination with flush mount installation, it gives a crisp aesthetic that matches perfectly with your brand.

PYLON, MONOLITHS AND TOTEMS

Pylon signs are great for drawing attention, helping visitors locate your premises and fostering brand awareness. Pylon signs consist of free standing poles, or poles supporting sign components such as light boxes or non-illuminated panels.

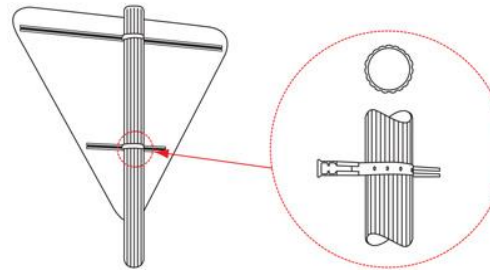

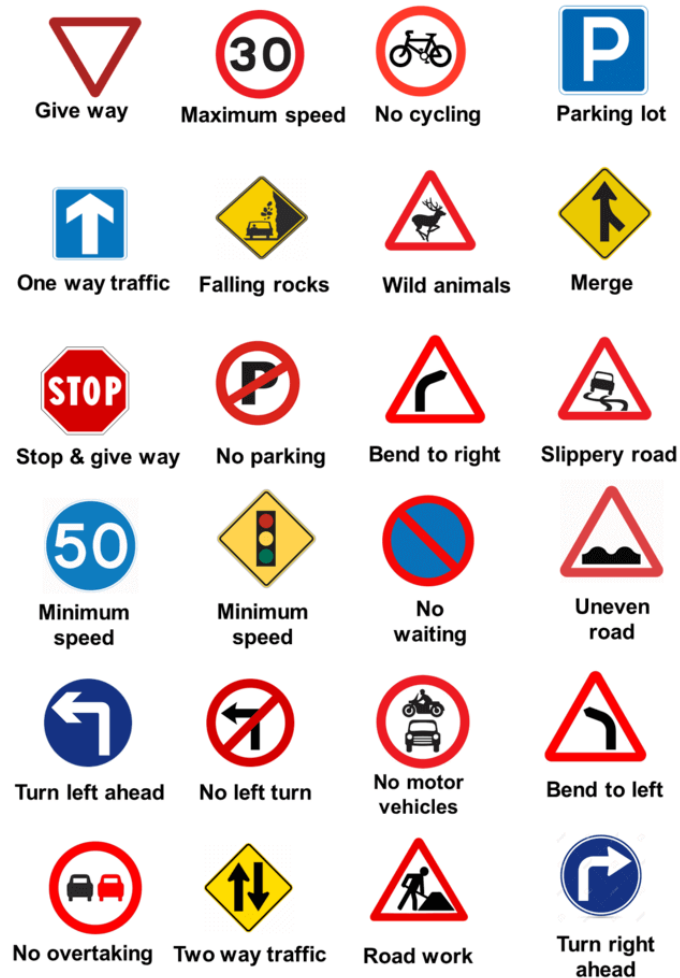

Monolith and totem signs are like pylons but with more intricate architecture. A monolith is a complete box structure. Totem signs are the same but smaller and thinner, often used within a building or to direct visitors leading to the foyer.

ROAD SIGNS

Road signs consisting of reflective sheet and galvanized breakaway sign posts make replacing damaged signs easy, fast and affordable.

Indoor signs are very important for any business as they help to tell the story of the business. They pass messages that help to improve customer relationship. They can also improve employee satisfaction and efficiency.

With attractive and effective interior signage. The right signage can establish your brand, deliver your company's message, give customers direction, and promote your seasonal items. You can accomplish some of these things with outdoor signage, of course, but you can't rely on it alone. Interior signage is key.

ADA COMPLIANT SIGNS (AMERICANS WITH DISABILITIES ACT)

ADA signs are often found indoors or at the entrance of a building.

Because the main purpose of ADA signs is to identify accessible features and be readable for visually impaired occupants, they need to include clear visual characters as well as tactile characters. Tactile characters are either raised letters or braille. Simply including tactile characters isn't enough. ADA signs need to be placed within a standard height range so that when a visually impaired occupant comes to a room in your building, they know where to feel for the braille.

ADA COMPLIANT SIGNS (AMERICANS WITH DISABILITIES ACT)

Photopolymer signs are durable, reliable, and fully compliant with the 2010 Revisions to the Americans with Disabilities Act. It is the one of the only signage products that provides a properly spherical, fully integral braille dot.

Photopolymer signs are created by using a mold, which heat and pressure are applied to, creating fully integrated product.
